Official in CIA Is Nominated To Full General

President Eisenhower today nominated Air Force Lt. Gen. Charles P. Cabell, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, for the rank of full general:

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Ormond E. Hunt of Michigan as a member of the Post Office Department's advisory board. Mr. Hunt, who was executive vice president of General Motors from 1942 to 1949, and is now a director of the company, succeeds the late John Coleman.

The President, also sent to the Senate a long list of nominations for promotion in the foreign service.

The list included promotion of three from the rank of foreign service officers, class one, to that of career minister. These were:

Walworth Barbour of Massachusetts, second man in the United States Embassy in London; Homer M. Byington, jr. of Connecticut, serving as Ambassador to Malaya, and James K. Penfield of California, second man in the American Embassy in Athens:
